December 4, 2010

Shabbat Shalom from Grandpa Joe to my extended family,

Back in September I gave you an article written by a Doctor from South Africa who was sharing what she had learned about the pill which many women use as contraceptive to prevent them from having children. You can read this article at https://sightedmoon.com/sightedmoon_2015/?page_id=677 titled News Letter 5846-032 6449 May Your Name be Written in the Book of Life & The Pill

Then a couple of weeks later I was shown from the book of Jasher another article in which the people before the flood used to drink a certain potion in order not to have children and how displeased Yehovah was with this. You can read this at News Letter 5846-034 6374 Shabbat Shuva & The Pill in Noah's Day https://sightedmoon.com/sightedmoon_2015/?page_id=680

For the past month I have been very tough on Judah and the false teaching that are put forth as fact from them. It is now time to turn our attention back on ourselves, for we are no better.

Since WW II The State of Israel has assisted in the abortion of almost 2 Million babies. Each female soldier in Israel is given two state sponsored abortions while they are in the service of the army. If they do not accept the abortion they are kicked out of the army immediately.

I would like you to watch the two videos at <http://www.beadchaim.com/In-the-News>

If you have had an abortion, please I am not here to condemn you. But you do have things you will want to and need to talk about, even after 30 years. This web site above is posted to help you. Not to condemn you, so please watch the two videos at the above site.

<http://www.abundantlife.org.il/>

Here in Canada in the year 2006, 20.7 % of all pregnancies were aborted. 20.7% one 5th of all the children.

Since 1970 when they began to record abortions Canada has aborted just under 3 million children. You can read the statistics at

<http://www.johnstonsarchive.net/policy/abortion/abcanada.html>

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Abortion_in_the_United_States

Abortion in the United States has been legal for women since the Supreme Court decision in Roe v. Wade of January 22, 1973. That decision established that a woman has a right to self-determination (often referred to as a "right to privacy") covering the decision whether or not to carry a pregnancy to term, but that this right must be balanced against a state's interest in preserving fetal life.

Again since 1970 up to 2005 The USA has recorded abortions of 37.5 Million babies. And not all abortions are recorded. This is greater than the whole population of Canada which is over 30 million.

The trend follows a damning report published last year which showed Britain had become the abortion capital of Europe, overtaking France for the first time. There were 219,336 terminations carried out in 2007, compared to 209,699 in France, 150,000 in Romania, and 127,000 in Italy.

We have heard so much about the abortion issue over the years that many of us have become callas to even thinking about it.

This article was planned before the arrival of my Granddaughter. But her birth shines a spotlight on the issue.

When I looked at China the statistics blew me away. I had to relook at it several times. I could not believe the number I was seeing. I am not even going to try and add them up. I am too afraid. But for just 2007 the number of recorded abortions was 7632539. That is over 7 million babies in one year. This is the average number each year for 36 years. That is about 252 Million babies aborted since 1970. That is almost the size of the USA, that have been aborted by the Chinese.

During WW II Hitler killed 1.5 Million Jewish children. The State of Israel has helped to kill almost 2 Million. During WW II Hitler killed about 6 million Jews in the death camps.

Estimates range from about 50-70 million killed in World War 2. The Wikipedia article "World War II Casualties" favours the relatively high figure of 72 million. Of these, 61 million were on the Allied side and 11 million were on the Axis side. The article gives a figure of 23 million dead for the Soviet Union and 20 million for China. These figures of course include civilian dead. (Note that the figure for China was recently revised sharply upwards from earlier estimates of about 11 million).

For Germany the overall total is given as just under 7.4 million.

Not even counting the abortions of China but just North America; that is the USA and Canada we have aborted 40.5 Million children since 1970. Almost as many as were killed in the Second World War all together; and people say Hitler was bad.

Using these statistics Hitler is a saint in comparison to present day Society.

Do you not see something terribly wrong with that statement?

Are we completely out of our minds?

Our society encourages multiple lovers on TV and in many books. It promotes sex on all levels of our media. But when someone is caught in infidelity or someone becomes pregnant then society pooh-poohs that. We have hypocritical double standards that are ruining us and killing our children.

Without thinking, without a care we, and yes I do mean even those of us who do not do abortions; all of us have fallen for the Babylonian and Assyrian religions and worship and not given it a second thought. We do this because we are not religious; we do this because we do not care nor want to find out. We enjoy being the ostrich with our ass in the air and head in the ground. What we do not know will not hurt us, or so we think. We are cursed with a curse, and all of us have accepted the blood of these innocents as being OK. Their blood is on our collective hands. None of us are free of it.

In 1983 I heard a sermon that was to change my life. I have never forgotten this one sermon. I am now going to share it with you. And I want you to think about this.

Israel was kicked out of the land because they had descended down to the level of the nations they had removed who were there when they came in with Joshua. They had removed the Ammorites, Moabites, Perizzites, Canaanites, Hittites Gurgashites, Hivites and Jeusites because these peoples had given sway to the worship of Nimrod in all of its perverted ways. Some of the people who were amongst the innumerable multitudes that crossed the Red Sea with the Israelites also began to practice these perverted teachings and took them with them when they left and came to what is now Mexico and the Yucatan Peninsula. Yes I am talking about the Aztec and Inca people.

When Israel, the Northern Ten Tribes were kicked out of the land in 723 BC, did they learn a lesson? No not at all. They continued to practice these same things in the lands they were driven to.

One of the places some of Israel fled to was Carthage on the north coast of Africa.

Phoenicians were also Israelite Tribes according to Yair Davidiy at <http://www.britam.org/Questions/QuesPhoenicians.html> so what follows is very disheartening.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Religion_in_Carthage

The Religion of Carthage was a direct continuation of the Phoenician religion with significant local modifications.

Carthage derived the original core of its religion from Phoenicia. The Phoenician pantheon was presided over by the father of the gods, but a goddess was the principal figure in the Phoenician pantheon. The system of gods and goddesses in Phoenician religion also influenced many other cultures. There are too many similarities to be overlooked. In some instances the names of gods underwent very little change when they were borrowed. Even the legends maintained major similarities. Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Persian and others had their influences on the Phoenician faith system as well as borrowed from it.

As Professor Louis Foucher wrote: "We are comparatively ill informed about the deities worshipped by the early Phoenicians when they came to Carthage from the East

Cippi and stelae of limestone are characteristic monuments of Punic art and religion, and are found throughout the western Phoenician world in unbroken continuity, both historically and geographically. The majority was set up over urns containing the ashes of human sacrifices, which had been placed within open-air sanctuaries. Such sanctuaries constitute striking relics of the Western Mediterranean Phoenician or Punic civilisation.

One of the most important stelae was the "Marseilles Tariff" found in the port of Marseille and originally from the temple of Baal-Saphon in Carthage. The tariff regulated the payments to the priests for performing sacrifices,[3] and is close related to the normatives and provisions of the Leviticus.[4]

Child sacrifice

Carthage was described by its competitors as practicing child sacrifice. Plutarch (ca. 46–120 AD) mentions the practice, as do Tertullian, Orosius, Diodorus Siculus and Philo. However, Livy and Polybius do not. The Hebrew Bible also mentions what appears to be child sacrifice practiced at a place called the Tophet ("roasting place") by the Canaanites, related to the Carthaginians, although there is to date no evidence of human sacrifice among the Canaanites.

In former times they (the Carthaginians) had been accustomed to sacrifice to this god the noblest of their sons, but more recently, secretly buying and nurturing children, they had sent these to the sacrifice.[5]

Some of these sources suggest that babies were roasted to death on a heated bronze statue. According to Diodorus Siculus, "There was in their city a bronze image of Cronus extending its hands, palms up and sloping toward the ground, so that each of the children when placed thereon rolled down and fell into a sort of gaping pit filled with fire." [5]

The accuracy of such stories is disputed by some modern historians and archaeologists.[6][7] Nevertheless, several apparent "Tophets" have been identified, chiefly a large one in Carthage, dubbed the "Tophet of Salammbó", after the neighbourhood where it was unearthed in 1921.

Sites within Carthage and other Phoenician centers revealed the remains of infants and children in large numbers; many historians interpret this as evidence for frequent and prominent child sacrifice to the god Ba'al Hammon.

Greek, Roman and Israelite writers refer to Phoenician child sacrifice. However, some historians have disputed this interpretation, suggesting instead that these were resting places for children miscarried or who died in infancy. The debate is ongoing among modern archeologists and historians. Skeptics suggest that the bodies of children found in Carthaginian and Phoenician cemeteries were merely the cremated remains of children that died naturally.[9] Sergio Ribichini has argued that the Tophet was "a child necropolis designed to receive the remains of infants who had died prematurely of sickness or other natural causes, and who for this reason were "offered" to specific deities and buried in a place different from the one reserved for the ordinary dead".[10]

According to Lawrence and Wolff there is a consensus among scholars is that Carthaginian children were sacrificed by their parents, who would make a vow to kill the next child if the gods would grant them a favor: for instance that their shipment of goods were to arrive safely in a foreign port.[11] They placed their children alive in the arms of a bronze statue of: " the lady Tanit The hands of the statue extended over a brazier into which the child fell once the flames had caused the limbs to contract and its mouth to open The child was alive and conscious when burned ... Philo specified that the sacrificed child was best-loved. [12]

Later commentators have compared the accounts of child sacrifice in the Old Testament with similar ones from Greek and Latin sources speaking of the offering of children by fire as sacrifices in the Punic city of Carthage, which was a Phoenician colony. Cleitarchus, Diodorus Siculus and Plutarch all mention burning of children as an offering to Cronus or Saturn, that is to Ba'al Hammon, the chief god of Carthage. Issues and practices relating to Moloch and child sacrifice may also have been overemphasized for effect. After the Romans finally defeated Carthage and totally destroyed the city, they engaged in post-war propaganda to make their arch enemies seem cruel and less civilized.

Motivations behind the sacrifices

Some authors, like Stager and Wolff,[11] believe that the real purpose behind children's sacrifices was birth control. The fact that the preferred victims were male, however, exposes the weakness of this theory. The most plausible motivation was, according to available evidence, to establish a way of "cementing the vertical and horizontal power relationship within the social structure".[13]

Evidence from archaeology

Most archaeologists accept that some sacrifices did occur. Lawrence E. Stager, Professor of Archaeology of Israel and Director of the Semitic Museum at Harvard University, who directed the excavations of the Carthage Tophet in the 1970's, takes the view based on ancient texts that infant sacrifice was practiced there. Stager is joined by Joseph Greene, Assistant Director of the Semitic Museum, a member of Stager's team in the excavations of Carthage, and author of the American Schools of Oriental Research's "Punic Project Excavations": Child Sacrifice in the Context of Carthaginian Religion: Excavations in the Tophet.

According to these scholars, in the Tophet of Salammbó, Carthage, an estimated 20,000 urns were deposited between 400 BC and 200 BC, with the practice continuing until the early years of the Christian period. The urns contained the charred bones of newborns and in some cases the bones of fetuses and 2-year-olds. These double remains have been interpreted to mean that in the cases of stillborn babies, the parents would sacrifice their youngest child. There is a clear correlation between the frequency of sacrifice and the well-being of the city. In bad times (war, poor harvests) sacrifices became more frequent, indicating an increased assiduousness in seeking divine appeasement, or possibly a population controlling response to the reduction of available food in these bad times, or perhaps increased child mortality due to famine or disease.

The area covered by the Tophet was probably over an acre and a half by the fourth century B.C., with nine different levels of burials. Archaeologists have also discovered evidence of child sacrifice in Sardinia and Sicily.

Animal remains, mostly sheep and goats, found inside some of the Tophet urns strongly suggest that this was not a burial ground for children who died prematurely. The animals were sacrificed to the gods, presumably in place of children (one surviving inscription refers to the animal as "a substitute"). It is conjectured that the children unlucky enough not to have substitutes were also sacrificed and then buried in the Tophet.

The Tophet

"Tophet" is a term derived from the Bible, used to refer to a site near Jerusalem in which Canaanites and Israelites sacrificed children. It is now used as a general term for all such sacred sites. In Carthage, it was the location of the temple of the goddess Tanit and the necropolis.

The Bible does not specify that the Israelite victims were buried, only burned, although the "place of burning" was probably adjacent to the place of burial. Indeed, soil in the Tophet of Salammbó was found to be full of olive wood charcoal, probably from the sacrificial pyres. We have no idea how the Phoenicians themselves referred to the places of burning or burial or to the practice itself, since no large body of Phoenician writing has come down to us.

Jeremiah 7:31 NKJ And they have built the high places of Tophet, which is in the Valley of the Son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire, which I did not command, nor did it come into My heart.

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Gehenna>

Gehenna (Greek ??????), Gehinnom (Rabbinical Hebrew: ?????, ?????,) and Yiddish Gehinnam, are terms derived from a place outside ancient Jerusalem known in the Hebrew Bible as the Valley of the Son of Hinnom (Hebrew ??? ??????????); one of the two principal valleys surrounding the Old City.

In the Hebrew Bible, the site was initially where apostate Israelites and followers of various Ba'als and false gods, including Moloch, sacrificed their children by fire (2 Chr. 28:3, 33:6; Jer. 7:31, 19:2-6).

Evidence for and against the practice of child sacrifice

It has been argued by some modern scholars that evidence of Carthaginian child sacrifice is sketchy at best and that it is far more likely to have been a Roman blood libel against the Carthaginians to justify their conquest and destruction. M'Hamed Hassine Fantar, Director of Research at the Institute of National Cultural Heritage, Tunisia, argues that the Tophet of Salammbó, Carthage, was a cemetery for stillborns and infants who had died of natural causes, and whose bodies were then cremated.

Sergio Ribichini has also argued that the Tophet was “a child necropolis designed to receive the remains of infants who had died prematurely of sickness or other natural causes, and who for this reason were “offered” to specific deities and buried in a place different from the one reserved for the ordinary dead”. He adds that this was probably part of “an effort to ensure the benevolent protection of the same deities for the survivors.” [14] The few Carthaginian texts which have survived make no mention of child sacrifice, though Carthaginian votive steles (several in Egyptian style) display a priest carrying a living-child, apparently to sacrifice.

Conversely, work at Motiya, an island off Sicily which was home to a large Phoenician colony, showed that the bones of children buried in the local Tophet belonged to male children under the age of five. There was no evidence of disease in these bones (which survived cremation). This argues against the theory that children buried in the Tophet died of random causes. As effective a tool of anti-Carthaginian propaganda child sacrifice may have been, the Motiyan investigation offered strong evidence to support the classical sources.

That is what is said in Wikipedia about Carthage. I would now like each of you to go to https://sightedmoon.com/sightedmoon_2015/?page_id=81 Titled Are You Worshiping Molech or Just keeping Christmas. And with many people adding a Chanukah bush to the Chanukah celebrations this week; I also want you to keep in mind what is being shown to you in this article.

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Hanukkah_bush

A Hanukkah bush is a bush or tree—real or simulated—that some American and Canadian Jewish families display in their homes for the duration of Hanukkah. It may, for all intents and purposes, be a Christmas tree (without any Christian ornaments).

Remember what we have recently read about the Festival of Lights which both Chanukah and Christmas are a celebration of. And the god Kronos which Alexander Hislop says the following;

The classic reader may remember that one of the gods of primeval antiquity was called Ouranos, * that is, “The Enlightener.”

* For Aor or our, “light,” and an, “to act upon” or produce, the same as our English particle en, “to make.” Ouranos, then, is “The Enlightener.” This Ouranos is, by Sanchuniathon, the

Phoenician, called the son of Elioun—i.e., as he himself, or Philo-Byblius, interprets the name, “The Most High.” (SANCH) Ouranos, in the physical sense, is “The Shiner”; and by Hesychius it is made equivalent to Kronos, which also has the same meaning, for Krn, the verb from which it comes, signifies either “to put forth horns,” or “to send forth rays of light”; and, therefore, while the epithet Kronos, or “The Horned One,” had primarily reference to the physical power of Nimrod as a “mighty” king; when that king was deified, and made “Lord of Heaven,” that name, Kronos, was still applied to him in his new character as “The Shiner or Lightgiver.”

Now we have just read above in Wikipedia the following; Cleitarchus, Diodorus Siculus and Plutarch all mention burning of children as an offering to Cronus or Saturn, that is to Ba`al Hammon, the chief god of Carthage.

Cronus is the same as Kronos. Please read the article Are you Worshiping Molech and Just keeping Christmas. Once you have read the article then come back and read what is to follow.

The USA and Canada, The United Kingdom and Australia and New Zealand and South Africa are all part of the current Ten Northern Tribes of Israel. We were to set the example to the rest of the world on how to live and be living testimony to the law of Yehovah. We have not done this. In fact we have not only not upheld these values, we have instead gone after the values of those nations who knew not the law of Yehovah and done even worse.

I have shown you just how many infants have been aborted just since 1970. These are the ones reported. The numbers are mind numbing. In the article I have asked you to read above, I show you how Israel was out of the land or as it was written, the land will vomit you out for these abominations. These abominations are the Live Sacrifices of Children done to the god Molech in the valley of Gehenna. Today it is called Christmas and Chanukah. Same abomination just wrapped up in different paper. It is still something the land is about to vomit us out for and is still putrid to Yehovah.

Are we so stupid to think that because we are now modern and supposedly more civilized today that Yehovah can't touch us? I would say give your head a shake, but I do not need to, because Yehovah is going to give each of these Hebrew nations a shaking like none the world has ever seen, no nor ever will see again. And once He has shaken the living tar out of Israel, The USA and UK and her commonwealth of nations, Yehovah is going to turn His attention to those other nations of the world and shake them.

Isaiah 2: 19 And they shall go into the holes of the rocks, and into the caves of the earth, from dread of ???? and the splendour of His excellency, when He arises to shake the earth mightily. 20 In that day man shall throw away his idols of silver and his idols of gold, which they made, each for himself to worship, to the moles and bats, 21 to go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the crags of the rugged rocks, because of the fear of ???? and the splendour of His excellency, when He arises to shake the earth mightily. 22 Cease from man, whose breath is in his nostrils, for in what is he to be reckoned upon?

Isaiah 13: 11 “And I shall punish the world for its evil, and the wrong for their crookedness, and shall put an end to the arrogance of the proud, and lay low the pride of the ruthless. 12 “I shall make mortal man scarcer than fine gold, and mankind scarcer than the gold of Ophir. 13 “So I shall make the heavens tremble, and the earth shall shake from her place, in the wrath of ??? of hosts and in the day of the heat of His displeasure. 14 “And it shall be as the hunted gazelle, and as a sheep that no man takes up – every man turns to his own people, and everyone flees to his own land. 15 “Whoever is found is thrust through, and everyone taken falls by the sword. 16 “And their children are dashed to pieces before their eyes, their houses plundered and their wives ravished.

The one thing that we know of today that will shake both Heaven and earth are Nuclear bombs.

On the Hill East of Jerusalem Solomon made an altar to Molech and there his wives made sacrifices. What would they have sacrificed?

1 King 11:7 Then Shelomoh built a high place for Kemosh the abomination of Mo’ab?, on the hill that is east of Yerushalayim, and for Molek? the abomination of the children of Ammon. 8 And so he did for all his foreign wives, who burned incense and slaughtered to their mighty ones. 9 Therefore ??? was enraged with Shelomoh, because his heart had turned away from ??? Elohim of Yisra’?l, who had appeared to him twice, 10 and had commanded him concerning this word, not to go after other mighty ones. But he did not guard what ??? had commanded. 11 And ??? said to Shelomoh, “Because you have done this, and have not guarded My covenant and My laws, which I have commanded you, I shall certainly tear the reign away from you and give it to your servant. 12 “Only, I do not do it in your days, for the sake of your father Dawid?. Out of the hand of your son I shall tear it. 13 “Only, I shall not tear away all the reign but give one tribe to your son for the sake of my servant Dawid?, and for the sake of Yerushalayim which I have chosen.” 14 And ??? raised up an adversary against Shelomoh, Had?ad? the Ed?omite. He was of the seed of the sovereign in Ed?om

Because of this awful thing that Solomon did, the reign was torn from him.

In exodus 20:14 we are told not to commit Adultery.

Yahshua expanded this commandment so that even if we lusted after a women we would have committed adultery. Mathew 5: 27 Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: 28 But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart. 29 And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

This is where the abortion issue begins; In the lust of the eyes. It then grows into an adulterous relationship or a fornications one. Once this is acted upon then when a child is conceived then the mother is left to commit the murder of the child which then breaks the command found in Exodus 20:13 You shall not murder.

No it is not just the woman who commits murder; it also the man who the moment he unzipped his pants with the full intention of not committing to this relationship has also committed murder. These men are nothing but cowards and scoundrels, having gotten the lust quotient satisfied, they now walk away as if nothing happened. Leaving all the consequences to the woman. Where are the real men? Is there such a thing in these last days?

Paul wrote in 2 Tim 3:1 But know this, that in the last days perilous times will come: 2 For men will be lovers of themselves, lovers of money, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, 3 unloving, unforgiving, slanderers, without self-control, brutal, despisers of good, 4 traitors, headstrong, haughty, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, 5 having a form of godliness but denying its power. And from such people turn away! 6 For of this sort are those who creep into households and make captives of gullible women loaded down with sins, led away by various lusts,

We need real men to stand up and put an end to this dreadful cycle of lust and sex and abortions. When you see the lights of Christmas and Chanukah Remember that Kronus the one who began this murderous teaching of sacrificing the unborn and the newly born on his birthday of Dec 25 at the winter solstice had these children sacrificed to himself alive on a red hot statute of himself. This is why this time of year is for the children. It was to kill them.
